Warranty Audit Bulletin

WAB 2013 001 Subject: Line clocking

✓Dealer Principal ✓Service Manager ✓Warranty Clerk

Over the past 6 months my audit team have detected an increase of non-compliance to the line clocking requirement that was made mandatory with the update to the Warranty Procedure Manual (WPM) on 01/03/2011 & further updated on 01/01/2013, refer to Appendix A4-C

4.4.3.3. Time Recordings
The full date and time (start & end) for all retail, warranty and internal repairs must be accurately and separately recorded against the Repair Order using a computerised Dealer Management System (DMS). These time recordings must also include the technician's payroll number and corresponding job line number from the front of the Repair Order. The job line number/clock time must also be used on any corresponding warranty claim; all warranty claims must be individually clocked. The off/on times for all rest breaks, waiting for parts, other non-productive activities and overnight (when applicable) must also be recorded. Where computerised time recording systems are used appropriate controls must be in place to prevent unauthorised manual amendments to the records. Systems without these kinds of controls are not admissible for warranty assessing. Any manual amendments must be traceable by system, audit records/reports and authorised by the Dealer Principal. Unless otherwise directed by this manual, the Service Procedure Manual, General Letter, or Warranty Information Bulletins, claims cannot be submitted for repairs not supported by the appropriate clocking records. Handwritten time recordings are not acceptable.

The MMAL audit team will continue to enforce this policy so please ensure all staff involved in warranty claims are familiar with the policy and its requirements.
